Success & Stories

BUSIA WOMEN CROSS BORDER
TRADERS SACCO (BUSIA-KENYA)

From Training to Transaction: A Busia Market Linkage Sparks New Hope for Smallholder Farmers

In the heart of Busia's vibrant cross-border economy, a simple transaction of 25 kilograms of soybeans is telling a much larger story—one of partnership, empowerment, and a new vision for regional trade. This success is a direct result of the AGMARK initiative, funded by AGRA and implemented to empower women and youth in structured grain trade.

The catalyst was a recent AGMARK training in Busia, Kenya, where 42 traders were empowered in structured grain trading systems. The project team facilitated a roundtable discussion, bringing five local farmer organizations face-to-face with the newly trained traders. This was the market linkage component in action, transforming theory into tangible opportunity.

It was here that the Busia Women Cross Border traders Sacco Chairlady, Florence Atieno, a proactive leader, met Margaret Okonda of the Asing'e Aggregation Centre. Florence, who had a desire for reliable supply, was seeking quality produce. Margaret, representing a collective of dedicated smallholder farmers, was in search of stable and fair market access. The connection was immediate and productive, Florence made a purchase: 25 kg of soybeans, directly from the Asing'e Aggregation Centre. With expectation of more business from the group since Busia CBTS have a milling investment, most of the purchases were for milling and eventual sales as flour by the CBTA

While a single bag of beans is a modest start, its significance is profound. It represents the first spark of a formalized trade relationship, exactly the kind of outcome the AGMARK project was designed to create. This successful linkage, demonstrates:

- Direct Access Creates Opportunity: The roundtable eliminated barriers, allowing Margaret's farmers to sell directly to a committed CBTA member, ensuring better value and a reliable partnership.
- Building Trusted Networks: The CBTA, strengthened by AGMARK, provided a platform of trust that made this quick, confident transaction possible. For Margaret Okonda, the impact was equally transformative

Funded by AGRA, the project is proud to facilitate these critical connections. This success in Busia is a concrete step towards achieving the project's ambitious goals, including linking 100 farmer organizations to anchor off-takers and enabling millions in trade across targeted borders. It proves that by investing in people and creating deliberate market linkages, we are building a more inclusive and prosperous future for cross-border trade in East and Southern Africa.

"To sit at the same table with a serious buyer and make a deal based on mutual respect is everything. This sale to Florence is more than income; it's a door opening for my entire farmer organization." —Margaret Okonda, Asing'e Aggregation Centre

Kgs Soya Beans

25 kg of Soya sold instantly on the 3rd day of the training; farmer carried their produce to showcase quality

"This is the missing link we've been waiting for, the AGMARK training gave us the tools, and this direct introduction gave us the partner. We now have a trusted source for quality produce, which is the foundation for growing a sustainable business."

Challenges & Mitigation

Challenges and Mitigation

CHALLENGES

Ineffective Coordination

Limited coordination between Namanga CBTAs and government agencies hinders their effectiveness.

MITIGATIONS

The Joint Border Coordination Committee (JBCC) convenes monthly meetings at the Namanga One Stop Border Post (OSBP), alternating between Kenya and Tanzania. For this month, the meeting is scheduled for October 15, 2025, and AGMARK has been invited to participate.

Use existing mechanisms such as the Joint Border Coordination Committee to negotiate policy alignment and address trade disparities.
